John Deere Connected Support Why should you connect?

Technology has become essential in our day-to-day life; it keeps us on track and offers countless efficiencies. In agriculture, technology has been around for years, in terms of machines and equipment. Recently, it has advanced by adding mechanical intuition to improve performance on and off the field.

One of the newer features in agricultural technology is wireless data transfer and remote connectivity. With John Deere Connected Support, farmers can connect equipment to a computer, tablet, or phone to monitor and transfer valuable data.

This also provides the ability to connect equipment to a local Cornthwaite Group depot to monitor machine alerts, diagnose problems remotely and perform software updates. This wireless connection saves time and keeps machines in the field when it matters, by allowing rapid, wireless data transfers.

The Countdown Is On!

A mandatory update is required for all StarFire 3000 and 6000 receivers by 1st February 2021. This can be done by one of the following options -

- Option 1 Self install via StellarSupport.com (approx. 2+ hours)
- Option 2 If you have a connected tractor, follow the steps in our video - access via the QR Code.
- Option 3 To have your device updated in field, schedule a service call.
- Option 4 Bring your receiver(s) into your local depot to be updated.
